The nursery room

In the story, a mother and father struggling with their technologically advanced home, ask David MacClean, a psychologist, for help because their children have become addicted to their Nursery Room, a virtual reality room.

“I wish I knew what it was,” said George Hadley. “Sometimes I can almost see. Do you think if I brought high-powered binoculars here and —”

David McClean laughed dryly. “Hardly.” He turned to study all four walls. “How long has this been going on?”

5 “A little over a month.”

“It certainly doesn’t feel good.”

“I want facts, not feelings.”

“My dear George, a psychologist never saw a fact in his life. He only hears about feelings; vague things. This doesn’t feel good, I tell you. Trust my hunches and my instincts. I have a nose for something bad. This is very bad. My advice to you is to have the whole damn room torn down and your children brought to me every day during the next year for treatment.”

“Is it that bad?”

“I’m afraid so. One of the original uses of these nurseries was so that we could study the patterns left on the walls by the child’s mind, study at our leisure, and help the child. In this case, however, the room has become a channel toward-destructive thoughts, instead of a release away from them.”

“Didn’t you sense this before?”

“I sensed only that you bad spoiled your children more than most. And now you’re letting them down in some way. What way?”

"I wouldn't let them go to New York."

"What else?"

25 "I've taken a few machines from the house and threatened them, a month ago, with closing up the nursery unless they did their homework. I did close it for a few days to show I meant business."

"Ah, ha!"

"Does that mean anything?"

30 "Everything. Where before they had a Santa Claus now they have a Scrooge. Children prefer Santas. You've let this room and this house replace you and your wife in your children's affections. This room is their mother and father, far more important in their lives than their real parents. And now you come along and want to shut it off. No wonder there's hatred here. You can feel it coming out of the sky. Feel that sun. George, you'll have to change your life. Like too many others, you've built it around creature comforts. Why, you'd starve tomorrow if something went wrong in your kitchen. You wouldn't 35 know how to tap an egg. Nevertheless, turn everything off. Start new. It'll take time. But we'll make good children out of bad in a year, wait and see."

Why companies are hiring sci-fi writers to imagine the future

If you want to peer into the future, put down the Magic 8 Ball and pick up a work of science fiction. Thanks to the uncanny prophetic ability of their authors, classic sci-fi tomes have long predicted the ubiquity of everything from cellphones (Star Trek) to 5 earbuds (Fahrenheit 451) to antidepressants (Brave New World). It's no surprise, then, that businesses and other major governing bodies—which rely on forecasting and trend analysis to not only stay afloat, but ahead of the curve—have turned to the sci-fi world for answers.

10 "Sci-fi prototyping" has become big business. In recent years, major multi-national companies like Nike, Google, Apple, Ford and Visa, and governmental bodies like NATO and the French army, have all enlisted the services of sci-fi writers, commissioning conceptual futuristic narratives to help them imagine the worlds in which their products, services and strategies might very soon exist.

15

In fact, entire businesses have been built around the usefulness of what technologist Julian Bleecker dubbed “design fiction” in 2009. Take SciFutures, a Los Angeles-based operation founded by [...] sci-fi nerd Ari Popper. For a negotiable fee, Popper’s team passes on client concerns (e.g., the future of payments for Visa) to a team of sci-fi writers, who churn out helpful, future-minded narratives, ultimately delivering insights to the client from several stories. For an extra fee, SciFutures can also produce videos, graphic novels and even physical or “experiential” environments. (For Visa, SciFutures built a “living room of the future” to demonstrate how customers could make payments from the comfort of their homes using only their voices.)

1. Compréhension de l'oral (10 points)

Vous rendrez compte, en français, de ce que vous avez compris du document.

2. Compréhension de l'écrit (10 points)

Give an account, in English and in your own words, of text 1 and then of text 2.

In your account of text 1:

- Briefly present the protagonists and the situation.
 - Explain what initial purpose the Nursery Room was supposed to serve.
 - According to the psychologist, what may account for the Hadley children's addiction?

In your account of text 2:

- Explain what “sci-fi prototyping” is.
 - What services are given by SciFutures?

3. Expression écrite (10 points)

Vous traiterez en anglais, et en 120 mots minimum, l'un des deux sujets suivants au choix :

Sujet A

How realistic should sci-fi stories be?

Sujet B

These are some of the reactions collected in street interviews about science fiction.

Which one corresponds best to your own views? Justify your choice.

LISA

The main purpose of science fiction is to make us escape reality by making us dream of other universes or other realities.

MATTHEW

Science fiction enables us to explore the potential consequences of today's scientific innovation and how it could affect our lives in the near future.

RILEY

Though science fiction stories do not take place in our world, their conflicts and characters are rooted in reality. That is why they are so fascinating and compelling!
